By Russia

(From Our Own Correspondent).
Peking, Nov. 4.—The Central Government has decided to assume responsibility for the loans contracted with Russia by the Government of Outer Mongolia, but will be unable to put this decision into effect until after the appointment of the Chin Yun-peng Cabinet and the completion of arrangements by that body for a big reorganization loan. An assurance to this effect has been given to the Outer Mongolian representatives at the time in Peking, who have, at the same time, been informed that Peking will as soon as possible make arrangements meeting Outer Mongolia's annual administrative expenses.

No reply has yet been given to the recent protest by the Russian Legation against the Sino-Mongolian plan for the cancellation of Outer Mongolia's autonomous rights under the Tri-Party Agreement, and nothing will be done in this direction until Liu Ching-jen, the new Minister to Japan, who took part in the Sino-Russo-Mongolian negotiations that led up to this agreement and is well informed as to Russian and Mongolian affairs, returns to Peking.

Use Of Boxer Indemnity In Aid Of Schools Urged By British Trade Conference

Chihli Conservancy Work, Coast Trade Survey, Drug Traffic Control And Need Of Ships Are Other Questions Dealt With

Remission of part of the Boxer Indemnity to aid British educational institutions and send Chinese to the United Kingdom to be educated; financial support for the River Improvement Commission of Chihli; study of the navigation of the Yangtze; a trade survey of China coast ports; control over the production and traffic of opium, morphine and cocaine; protection for steamers plying along the China Coast; more ships for the Far Eastern trade and the formation of an association of British Chambers of Commerce in China and Hongkong were, urged in resolutions passed yesterday by the British Trade Conference in session here.

The headquarters of the new association, the logical outgrowth of the present conference, will be in Shanghai and the secretary of the Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, Mr. E. M. Gull, is to be secretary of the organization. Meetings will be held annually.

The need for development of British publicity work in China is pointed out in one resolution that was passed yesterday while another asks British firms to encourage members of their staffs to learn Chinese.

One of the two resolutions passed at the Thursday session but not announced until yesterday regrets that the British Government fails to recognise the imperative need of a radical revision in the scale of pay in the British civil service in China. The other suggests that the Diplomatic Commercial Service be strengthened by the addition of secretaries and assistants to be stationed at Shanghai, Tientsin, Hankow, Canton and other important trade centers.

"That in view of the importance to China of the River Yangtze as its main inland artery of trade; and the little actual knowledge of its channels, this Conference is of the opinion that the time has come when an accurate survey should be made of the entire river and all main waterways which feed or drain the system. It is further suggested that the Chinese Government be petitioned to appoint at the earliest time a Conservancy Board to deal with the question, but that strong pressure be brought to bear on the Government at once to undertake adequate measures for the aid of navigation on the Yangtze and its main tributary waterways."

TRAFFIC IN DRUGS

"That this Conference of British Chambers of Commerce assembled at Shanghai is convinced of the necessity for immediate action by the British Government with regard to the opium and drug traffic, and that in the best interests of Great Britain's prestige and of her Commerce in the Far East the Government should give immediate effect to the various measures which the International Opium Convention agreed to in 1912 at the Hague Conference in respect to 'raw opium,' prepared opium, medicinal opium, morphine, cocaine, etc., without waiting for ratification by other countries, and would especially urge the British Government to control the production of such habit-forming drugs and to limit their production to the amount required for legitimate medical use, and to limit their export to such countries as have established Laws and Regulations which effectively control the traffic in these

NEW $30,000,000 LOAN SUBJECT OF PROTEST

Wine And Tobacco Association Of Shanghai Sees Loss Of Sovereign Rights

(From Our Own Correspondent).
Peking, November 3.—The Chinese Wine and Tobacco Association of Shanghai has telegraphed to the Peking Government protesting against the new Wine and Tobacco Loan.

The message says: "It has been mentioned in the press that Hsu En-yuan has signed a big loan in America. This means a further loss of our sovereign rights and a consequent injury to the people. We shall never recognize this loan."

Further protests against the loan have been received by the Government and the American Legation from persons representing small commercial or political groups, but the report that the Japanese Legation has made either formal or informal inquiries regarding the loan is incorrect.

Furthermore, most of the protests that have been made to date are phrased in such a way as to indicate that their authors are opposed to foreign loans regardless of their terms and the individuals or groups who have made them.

The publication of the terms of this and other loans cannot deal successfully with reasoning of this kind. It can, however, go far towards settling the doubts of those who realize that China must for the time being obtain foreign money for the rehabilitation of her finances but who at the same time are opposed to contracting financial obligations on the so-called pawn-broking method.

Intelligent public and official opinion here admits the necessity of foreign loans but desires that the money advanced be well spent and that the foreign power, group, or individual advancing the money shall not be entitled to the political or industrial control to the detriment of Chinese interests in return for such financial aid to this country.

Among persons who hold these views it is regarded as unfortunate that the Central Government, acting through the Asiatic News Agency, has seen fit to deny the existence of the American loan, the more so as Hsu En-yuan telegraphed the amount and the terms of the loan out to Peking over ten days ago.

It is thought that both the Government and the American Group will only gain by making public an official statement of the amount of the loan, the security on which it is to be advanced, the purposes for which it is to be spent and such other provisions as the loan contract contains.

This is all the more advisable because of the inevitable opposition of the South to any loan contracted by the Northern Government. If, however, as is thought probable, the American loan provides that the Southern Government shall receive a certain share of the funds, the official publication of the loan terms will nullify any protests that may be made by the South.

Anfuites Seeking Control Of New Peking Cabinet

Believed Ministry's Sole Chance To Effect Peace Lies In Dealing With Southern Militarists (Reuter's Pacific Service).

Peking, Nov. 7.—The new Cabinet will be submitted to Parliament this evening. Admiral Sah Chen-ping will replace Admiral Liu Kuang-hsing, who desires to retire after holding the Ministry of the Navy for eight years. It is understood that General Chin Yun-peng, has firmly refused to make the alterations suggested by the Anfui Club.

It is anticipated therefore that the Anfui Club will reject the Cabinet, after which the Government may resort to drastic measures. Chu-shen has signified his intention not to join a Cabinet which is hostile towards the Anfui Club.

There is considerable opposition on the part of the opponents of the New Consortium towards Chow Tze-chi's nomination as Minister of Finance.

(From Our Own Correspondent).
Peking, November 4.—The nomination of General Chin Yun-peng as Premier passed the Senate this afternoon by a vote of 113 to 1, thus leaving the way clear for the selection of a formal Chin Cabinet. It is expected that the nominations of the various members of the Cabinet, which should have gone before the Lower House today, will be delayed for a while, so that they may not get to Parliament before the end of the week.

The cause of this delay in putting forward the names of the Cabinet Ministers is due to the activities of the Anfui Club, which desires to see a majority of its own members in the Cabinet and is not satisfied with the number allotted to it by General Chin and President Hsu.

Another reason for the delay lies in the fact that neither General Wu Ping-hsiang, the present Peking Chief of Police nor Tien Wen-ieh, the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, are anxious to accept the headship of the Ministry of the Interior on the terms offered them.

It is believed, however, that all difficulties will be shortly smoothed over and that the final Cabinet will see Anfui men at the head of the Ministries of Finance and Communications and of the Currency Bureau; the Ministries of War, the Navy and Foreign Affairs will in all probability retain their present incumbents; and it is thought that General Wu Ping-hsiang will finally be prevailed upon to take the Ministry of the Interior.

POST FOR YANG YI-TEH
In this event the appointment of General Yang Yi-teh of Tientsin to succeed General Wu as Chief of Police at Peking is likely. Yang's period of usefulness at Tientsin is over but he has powerful friends, among whom is Minister of Justice Chu Shen, who are working to obtain for him another influential post under the Government.

The Central Government has received word from Hongkong that the reorganization of the Military Government is a counter-measure to the formation of the formal Chin Cabinet and that the attitude of the South is hostile to any Cabinet changes in the North at this time. There is no question here that General Chin and his colleagues

Forcible Measures To Be

Are Not Executed

(French Wireless Service).

Paris, November 6, (Via Lyons and Koukaza).—A note from the Supreme Council was handed simultaneously to the Armistice Execution Commission and to the German Peace Delegation at Paris, stating that Germany had not executed a certain number of the obligations assumed by her. Thus a number of railway engines and trucks have still to be delivered; some troops have not been withdrawn from the territories to be evacuated; the full list of money and securities seized by the Germans has not yet been handed in; German ships were scuttled at Scapa Flow. Germany in fact has not fulfilled her entire duty.

PENALTIES ARE STATED

The Supreme Council, the note proceeds, has consequently decided on the application of a certain number of penal clauses, comprising the surrender of a few large ships, of a total tonnage of 400,000 tons, floating docks, and some small destroyers. Forcible measures will be taken in case of non-execution.

In addition, the note adds, nineteen plenipotentiaries must be sent to Paris, to settle with the representatives of the Allied and Associated Powers, the territorial questions calling for solution after the Treaty comes into force.

DEALS WITH PROBLEMS
The Supreme Allied Council met yesterday, M. Pichon presiding. It decided that Paris should be the seat of the first meeting of the Executive Committee of the League of Nations. This meeting has to be held with a view to bringing the Peace Treaty into force. The Council next began a recapitulatory examination of the questions still outstanding, the chief of which are:

The fate of Turkey; the Rumanian problem; the Hungarian Peace Treaty; delimitation of the eastern frontier of Poland; special treaties with Serbia, Yugoslavia and Rumania for the protection of minorities.

CHIENMEN GATE TOWER IS RETURNED TO CHINA

Part Of Wall Americans Have Guarded Since 1900 Turned Over To Chinese Authorities

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Peking, Nov. 4.—The tower on the Tartar Wall above Chienmen Gate, which has been guarded by American Marines ever since the Boxer Uprising in 1900, was formally turned over to the Chinese military authorities by the American Legation last Saturday. During the past 19 years Chinese soldiers have only been permitted to enter the tower and do sentry duty there on the day of the Anniversary of the Republic.

In view of the great change in conditions in Peking since 1900 General Wang Hual-ching, Chief of the Peking Gendarmerie, recently started a movement in Government circles for the restoration of the tower to Chinese control. This movement resulted in a request to the Diplomatic Corps for the retrocession of the tower. The foreign ministers made no opposition to this request and soldiers of the Peking Gendarmerie now guard the tower.

The Tartar Wall from Chienmen to Hatamen Gates is still guarded by American and Dutch Marines, the latter having taken over the German section of the wall when China broke off diplomatic relations with Germany.

League Holds World's Hope, Says Ex-Senator Burton

Former American Legislator And Consul-General Cunningham Speakers At Luncheon

In the League of Nations lies the world's hope for the future, so declared former U. S. Senator Theodore E. Burton before 150 American and Chinese college men assembled yesterday noon at the Carlton Cafe. It was the meeting of the American University Club at which Mr. Burton and Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham were the honored guests and speakers. Mr. Tang Shao-yi, president, though the gathering was called to order by the President, Mr. George Fitch. Among the distinguished guests were Dr. Sun Yat-sen, first president of China; Mr. Wen Tsung-yao, Mr. Quo Tai-chi and Judge Hu Yi-kuo of the Peking Supreme Court.

After a good natured reference to himself as an omertus in everything, including representative, senator and financier, Mr. Burton plunged into his discussion of the international situation with the declaration that the problems of Nov. 1919, are no less formidable than those of the war, and peace has her difficulties no less.

The world had hoped, said he, when the Kaiser with his suite in automobiles fled across the Holland-German border seeking a refuge in the little country that the Kaiser had bullied and threatened to annex, that the last of the spirit of might over right had passed. But that could only be if the League of Nations is realized and made a positive force, the former senator declared.

"I see in it," said he, "the hope of the future." Before President Wilson, advocated it, before even former President Taft championed it, I was talking for a League of Nations.

HOPE FOR FUTURE

I believe in it because it means co-operation instead of night. I am for the covenant in this treaty because, with a question under dispute the members must submit it to arbitration and neither side can go to war for three months after the decree of the Board of Arbitration.

"Do you think that war would have happened in August, 1914, if we had had such an arrangement?"

The speaker referred to the necessity of having some curb upon the hot-heads who heretofore have been able to carry a country into war. He spoke of the blunder of the Russian fleet 15 years ago in sinking British fishing craft in the North Sea in the belief that they were Japanese torpedo boats. Americans he said, might not have been so reasonable in such circumstances as was Britain.

ENDS SECRET TREATIES

He favored the covenant because it abolished secret treaties and secret diplomacy. With this his hearers agreed as indicated by their tremendous applause. He referred to the secret pacts between Germany, Bulgaria and Turkey, existing prior to the outbreak and guaranteeing that each would plunge into the war at a nod from Berlin. Such agreements have no place in a modern age, he said. The needs of backward people, safety for small nations, protection for the outlying parts of the earth against exploitation, all these things are taken care of in the covenant. The American Revolutionary war had given proof that no people can be held in subjection for the benefit of another people without disturbances such as to make it of no profit to the exploiter. And the world is now ready to accept that principle, he added.

The whole spirit of the covenant is that the world shall call a halt on the domination of the weak by the strong.

In closing, Senator Burton referred to the Far Eastern question and affirmed that America's interest in China and Japan is increasing and will continue to increase. America expects public opinion in China to assert itself so that on the political side China will develop and so that if there be grafters in the body politic that the Chinese will kick them out and China with her immense area and wonderfully capable people will yet take her place among the peoples that lead in liberty.

Consul-General Cunningham, who was called upon first, spoke briefly. Shanghai people might hear him any time, he said, but the treat of listening to Senator Burton would not come often. He referred to the advantages of college men meeting together and the international friendships that would spring up if the club be enlarged to include more of other nationalities. To his ears, he said, there was no finer music than the college yell. In Hankow, where he was stationed before coming here, more than 100 young Americans from the United States and Canada have organized one of the finest clubs he has ever seen anywhere, he said.

Mr. Theodore E. Burton was the guest at a reception and tea in his honor given at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. yesterday afternoon. Directors of the institution and about 40 members were present.

The guest of honor, who was introduced by Mr. S. C. Chu, vice-president of the Association, spoke on some of the things that interested him most in American political life. He warned his listeners against the spirit of class antagonism that has grown up between labor and employer and described some of the efforts made in America to lessen that friction. The Y.M.C.A. in China could be made of great influence for benefit to the people, he declared.

PEKING TO APPEAL

Shantung Case To League Of Nations

Government At Length States Policy In Message Sent To Provincial Assembly

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, November 3.—The Central Government has decided to lay the Shantung question before the League of Nations at the earliest possible date and a notification to this effect has been sent to the Shantung Provincial Assembly, which has been making persistent inquiries as to the Government's intentions. In the event that China's case falls before the League of Nations the Government will take other and more direct measures to obtain the rights to which it considers itself entitled in Shantung.

With regard to the Shantung question the Provincial Assembly of that province has been constantly active and has never failed to take an opportunity for urging the Government at Peking to keep the case prominently before the eyes of the world. The latest message from the Assembly, which has resulted in the Government's reply as set forth above, is as follows:

"Ever since the Treaty with Germany the people of Shantung Province have been under the impression that the statesmen at Peking, having already gone so far towards meeting the wishes of the people, would succeed in finding ways and means to save Shantung to China. Hence we have waited patiently for a solution of this great question.

"We have, however, been much disappointed to observe that the last few months have produced no results as far as Shantung is concerned; nothing has been done to save Tsingtau or restore to the Chinese people the rights and concessions of which it has been robbed. The Kao-Hsu and Shantung railway agreements, for instance, are still in force, and no steps have been taken to cancel them. Furthermore, the people have been kept in the dark as to Japan's intentions as well as of the plans of their own Government.

"We have, too, been much surprised at the recent speeches made by the Japanese commandant at Tsingtau, who has stated publicly that Japanese troops are entirely adequate for the protection and policing of the territory along the Tsingtau-Tsinanfu Railway and who advocated that Japan should always share with China the policing of these districts. This officer is evidently ambitious for his country in Shantung, and his speeches indicate that he hopes within a short time to become the real master of the province.

"We and the people whom we represent have thus reached the end of our patience; something must be done to solve the Shantung question. Hence we request the Government to make public its policy with regard to Shantung and to let the people know what negotiations have been entered into between China and Japan for the return of the Leased Territory.

We are prepared to bring sacrifices in the event that the Government is willing to take a firm stand as to the cancellation of the Shantung Railway Agreement and demand the restoration of all China's rights and privileges that were signed away by that agreement.

"Further delays in settling this matter will, however, be productive of serious results as far as this province is concerned; and if it appears that the Government will continue to disregard the interests of the people of Shantung, that no support will be given us for our just demands, we shall be obliged to work out our own salvation in our own way. In this event we shall take steps to defend our territory and to sell our lives as dearly as possible. The people of Shantung will not be the slaves of a foreign power.

"In the meantime we are anxiously awaiting the final decision of the Central Government."

At The Mixed Court

For biting a foreign lady's fingers in addition to robbing her, Woo Ching-yong, a Chinese youth of 17 years, was sentenced to six months by the Mixed Court yesterday.

The trouble took place at the Hongkong Market Thursday morning. Miss Whittefort was paying for a purchase when the boy snatched $4.60 out of her hand and attempted to run. The lady grabbed him and held until the thief, taking her fingers in his mouth, bit so hard that she was forced to let go.

Her outcries attracted a Sikh plain-clothes man who intercepted the fugitive but not before he had thrown away the money.

The Opera

One of the most satisfying performances of the Russian Opera Company's whole season, so far, was last night's "Romeo and Juliet" in all its five acts. The Olympic had fewer wastes of cold, empty seats, and the luscious music spread its warmth throughout the theater.

It is not to be doubted that the audience contributed very largely to this success, not by its noise, but by its attention, felt by those on the stage as well as by individuals in the auditorium.

Miss Kazanskaya was a pretty "Juliet." Her singing has so often been praised that it is superfluous to draw attention to the dainty finish of the first act which she made fascinatingly effective.

The part of Stephano by Miss Burskaya was another of her successes. In the fencing scene the sword-play in three consecutive duels began to approach the quality of the singing. Opera performers have so many things to do!

The triumph of the evening was Mr. Svetloff's "Romeo." This tenor has only once before had a part—in "Cavalleria"—and his reappearance was most welcome. To a voice of great power he adds much more rare qualities. He sings with an ardor and a distinctive air of being entirely absorbed that is difficult to describe, but etches itself deeply in the mind of the hearer. Few companies can boast a tenor with this personal magnetism, and the Russian Opera Company have in him a great asset.

Mr. Svetloff and Miss Kazanskaya received real ovations in the last two acts. Many of us will greet further appearances of Mr. Svetloff with the greatest pleasure.

The dresses were pretty and appropriate, whilst most of the staging was effective. When it is remembered that the company is only passing through Shanghai, and undertakes a fresh opera every night with such conspicuous success something must be allowed. The astonishing thing is the excellence of the general effect in so many widely different works. The cast:

BESSARABIA SENDS APPEAL TO WILSON

Her Delegates To The Peace Conference Charge Rumanians With Atrocities

ANCIENT TORTURES USED

Occupying Troops Abolish Native Courts And Seize Relief Supplies

By Walter Duranty
(New York Tribune)

Paris, September 23.—The Bessarabian delegates to the Peace Conference ask The New York Times to transmit to President Wilson the following appeal against what they term Rumanian tyranny:

"The Bessarabian delegates to the Peace Conference implore you to exercise your great influence to compel the Rumanian Government to cease the hideous reign of terror now prevailing in Bessarabia, owing to the unjustifiable and atrocious conduct of the Rumanian authorities there.

"Freedom of the press has ceased to exist in Bessarabia, and all real expression of opinion is rendered impossible. Therefore we are compelled to make a direct appeal to you.

"The Rumanian troops were authorized by the Central Powers in January, 1918, to enter Bessarabia, ostensibly for the purpose of restoring order. The Rumanian Government subsequently pleaded that there was great danger from Bolshevism in Bessarabia. This reason was entirely unfounded, as there never was such danger owing to the free and prosperous conditions prevailing. Nevertheless, the Entente also was induced to allow the Rumanians to enter the country.

"The Rumanian Government, without the least foundation in fact, interpreted this as equivalent to permission to annex Bessarabia and has acted ever since, as supreme master of the country. Since January, 1918, the Rumanian Government has followed a policy of ruthless imperialism in Bessarabia and has made every effort to Rumanianise it in spite of the fact that the whole civilisation and sympathies of the country are Russian and anti-Rumanian.

"The worst features of Magyar persecutions from which the Rumanians in Transylvania suffered before their liberation are being thrown into the shade by the atrocities today perpetrated in Bessarabia by the Bucharest Government. The situation there throws a startling light on the reasons why Rumania refused to sign the clauses in the peace treaty designed for the protection of minorities. The whole of the autonomous rights enjoyed by Bessarabia under Russian suzerainty have been swept away.

Local zemstvos and other organizations which were purely Russian in character and had stood the test of centuries have either been suppressed or totally modified. Rumanian gendarmes and other officials have replaced the old autonomous organizations and are practicing the bribery and extortion for which they are notorious in Eastern Europe.

COURTS ABOLISHED

"The old Bessarabian courts have been abolished and replaced by Rumanian tribunals, which the Bessarabians refuse to recognise, as Rumanian officials now admit. Out of 250 Bessarabian Judges and Magistrates over 240 have been dismissed because they refused to take the oath of allegiance to the King of Rumania and Rumanians have been put in their places. Bessarabian landowners have been given formal notice that unless they take the oath to the Rumanian King within a fortnight their estates will be confiscated.

"The use of the Russian language, which is universally spoken in Bessarabia, has been prohibited in the schools and replaced by Rumanian, which the pupils refuse to learn. Hundreds of schoolmasters and priests have been flogged, imprisoned, or deported—sometimes all three—while many others have been shot down in cold blood.

"Foodstuffs sent to Bessarabia from America and elsewhere for the relief of the population have been appropriated by the Rumanian authorities for their own people, and an absurdly small quantity has been allotted Bessarabia. A large number of people starved to death in Kishineff as the result of this barbarous policy of Rumania.

"We have now received from absolutely reliable sources in Bessarabia the information that Rumanian police there are employing methods of physical torture in vogue in the Middle Ages. We are in possession of evidence that Bessarabians belonging to the intellectual classes who are suspected of Russophile tendencies are being put to actual torture by Rumanian executioners. The methods adopted include tearing out fingernails and crushing finger-ends in doorhinges. Others are being flogged with India-rubber rods. Others have had their heads and feet tied together and their

Mrs. Pankhurst Says Women Will Kill Bolshevik Menace

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, England's most noted suffrage campaigner, who, between her daughters and herself, originated the "hunger strike," arrived in New York recently with a new theory. Mrs. Pankhurst says she is ready to combat the Bolshevik menace. She says that the same spirit which has spurred on woman suffrage will aid the women of the world in throttling Bolshevism. Mrs. Pankhurst advocates an open league between France, Great Britain and the United States to keep peace in the world, regardless of the opinions of other nations.

hands bound behind their backs and have been left in this condition a whole day, or until they have consented to give information concerning men and women who have become obnoxious to the Rumanian authorities.

"Full confirmation of many atrocities of this kind has been given us by a British officer just returned from Rumania. Furthermore, officers belonging to the French military mission who have been in South Bessarabia since February, 1919, have sent reports to their Government in which they mention a quantity of facts, testifying to Rumanian misrule and atrocities in Bessarabia and confirming our statements.

"Now that the Rumanian elections are approaching, the Rumanian Government is nominating throughout Bessarabia candidates for the Rumanian Parliament and using every possible coercive method to make Bessarabians promise to vote for them. A decree has been promulgated ordering every Bessarabian to participate in the Rumanian Parliamentary elections, which are entirely alien to them, under penalty of a fine of $200.

DEMAND FOR A PLEBISCITE

"We protest against these atrocities and unheard-of methods, and appeal most earnestly to you for aid. Rumania has no shadow of right to impose her will on a single Bessarabian. The Peace Conference has so far refused every appeal made by Rumania for permission to annex our country. We beg that our people be allowed to determine their own future by a plebiscite taken under control of the great Powers and guaranteed against interference by Rumanian agents. We are content to stand or fall by this test alone.

"In the immediate present we beg and pray you to intervene and save our helpless people from

"That this Conference is of the opinion that diaphones as used on all Canadian stations and U.S.A. coasts should be inaugurated in all places on the China Coast where light-houses are established for service in foggy weather; also that wireless position finders, as used in European and American waters, should be installed where requisite to enable steamers to obtain their exact position in the dense fogs prevalent on the China Coast and that the code of weather signals in China waters should be uniform."

MORE SHIPS NEEDED

"That this Conference urge all British firms in China to provide their staffs with facilities for learning the Chinese language written and spoken and where practicable to insist upon the acquisition of a working knowledge of the language."

"That this Conference is of the opinion that the long continued lack of facilities available to British subjects desiring to leave the United Kingdom, and other parts of the Empire, for the East on business affairs is causing serious loss of trade to the Empire, and that every effort should be made to release further ships for the Far Eastern trade."

"That this Conference recognises that the time has come for a comprehensive survey of the possibilities of the various China coast ports in relation to trade routes and areas, actual and potential, to be undertaken, and strongly recommends to H. M. Government the desirability of special investigations being undertaken to that end."

"That the Chambers represented in this Conference hereby enroll themselves in an Association which shall be known as the Association of British Chambers of Commerce in China and Hongkong; that the headquarters of the Association be the British Chamber of Commerce, Shanghai."

"That this Conference recommends to the consideration of H. M. Government and Chambers of Commerce in the United Kingdom the need for the development of British publicity work in China, in respect to the diffusion of general and commercial news; and that an organisation should be formed and subsidised for this purpose; further that the Journal of the Shanghai Chamber be made representative of all British Chambers in China and Hongkong and be recognised as the Journal of the Associated British Chambers in the country and Hongkong."

The following resolutions withheld from publication yesterday are now published.

"That it is the opinion of the representatives of British Chambers of Commerce assembled at this meeting that the Commercial Diplomatic Service in China be strengthened by the addition of secretaries and assistants, in order that officers may be stationed at Shanghai, Tientsin, Hankow and Canton, and other important trade centers as soon as possible."

"That this Conference is of the opinion that the scale of pay existing in H. M. Civil Service in China is entirely inadequate and regrets that notwithstanding the urgent representations made by Chambers of Commerce and kindred Associations throughout China H. M. Government evidently fails to recognise the imperative necessity for radical revision."

important line of railway communication between Vladivostok and Omsk has failed. The line has been blocked for a day or two at a time at a few points, but as a whole, the system is operating with more rolling stock now than last winter. The railroad men of Siberia are remarkably loyal to their duties. Ill-paid, ill-clothed and handling wheezy old stay at their posts on these danger-challenges admiration. Every

PUT BLAME ON BERCHTOLD

Germans Inclined To Defend Their Own Government's Course Berlin, September 21. (Associated Press).—While no official statement is yet obtainable in connection with the publication of the Austrian Red Book, Foreign Office attaches, who have been willing to discuss the disclosures, have ventured the opinion that "probably the most surprised men who read them will be Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, former Imperial Chancellor, and Gottlieb von Jagow, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and possibly Viscount Grey, who, in 1914, was British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Wilhelmstrasse believes, however, that the revelations will not minimise the guilt of Russia, while on the other hand they may clear up points relative to the German attitude during the critical days of July, 1914, especially her position on Viscount Grey's proposal to submit the Russo-Austrian dispute to arbitration.

It is declared at the Foreign Office that the evidence proves that the German Government not only transmitted Viscount Grey's suggestion to Vienna, but also was "insistent in urging its acceptance." It is held to be proved that Count Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister, apparently on purpose, delayed his answer to Berlin, sending it by courier, who reached here after mobilisation had been ordered. In the meantime Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg had been obliged to put off Sir William Edward Goschen, the British Ambassador, informing him that no answer had been received from the Austrian Foreign Office.

It is asserted that the Austrian Red Book "disposes of the legend of the Crown Council at Potsdam," at which a decision was reached to begin hostilities.

"The newspapers argue that the Red Book proves that Germany tried earnestly to prevent the outbreak of the war, and that Count Leopold von Berchtold bears the bulk of the responsibility by his "underhand tactics and deception."

The belief that Germany can demand a revision of the peace terms on the strength of the Red Book is expressed by the Boersen Zeitung, which intimates that the publication of the Red Book was planned to bring about such a demand.

The Kreuz Zeitung denounces what it calls the "inextinguishable guilt of Austrian diplomacy," while several other papers praise the courage and honesty that brought about the revelations of the Red Book. The Tageblatt says that Germany was required to keep silence about facts at the Peace Conference, so as not to hinder Austria's chances for a better peace. It goes on to say that the Government in 1914 "did not show the slightest interest in the situation and acted idiotically," adding that "Germans in power at that time played the part of thorough-going tools." The newspaper declares the revelations of the Red Book an "awful disgrace for Germany." the train would be fired on by the Reds. When the guerillas appeared, they did not shoot but they looted the train of what few valuables they could find. They even searched the trainmen and refugees taking clothes and money. One refugee woman reported that she had been robbed of all her money—300 rubles.

The freight cars contained flour, beans, mattress-ticking for military hospitals, some electrical supplies and miscellaneous food-stuffs. After loading up to their own capacity, the Bolsheviks set fire to some of the cars, and disappeared in the darkness.

This incident is typical of the warfare the Bolsheviks are carrying on over a wide stretch of Siberia between Vladivostok and Omsk. It is war behind the lines. It is directed largely against the Trans-Siberian railway and its victims are military and civilian alike. By far the larger number are civilian.
Military and the better class passenger trains are seldom wrecked but scores of mixed freight and passenger trains on which refugees and other civilians travel by the hundreds, have been wrecked between Irkutsk and Omsk. Between Krasnoyarsk and Taiga some 350 miles, there have been seven wrecks in eight days.

Russian and Czech soldiers guard the railway line between Omsk and Irkutsk. The main Czech army is here. But the troops are comparatively so few, the distances so great, the country so well suited to guerilla warfare, that many of the raiders escape with impunity.
Much of the country is wild and hilly, and except for a few large cities and towns, is thinly populated. It is well-wooded, with many low mountains and rolling hills.
After a swoop down on the railway line, the Bolsheviks can easily scatter into the hills. They operate in small bands and in a land already divided by factional warfare, they find sympathizers and helpers.
The peasants are afraid to give information about the Reds, fearing outrage and terrible reprisals.

This guerilla warfare has been going on for months. Occasionally some of the attackers are caught, and the not infrequent spectacle of men hanging to telegraph poles bears witness to that they are summarily punished. Sometimes is a special thing with us.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying power, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria.

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better." JOSE J. LEPPA, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"For several years I recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results." EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies." VICTOR H. CORFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm." J. A. FARRER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

APPEARANCE

In appearance they represent the highest perfection of modern streamline design—with full-sweeping lines and low-hung stylish effect. Every owner of an Overland has pride in ownership. Every Overland owner is an unpaid salesman for our account—all his friends want to buy one.

PERFORMANCE

They are equally pleasing in performance. Each has an abundance of power for its weight, delivered by an engine that runs smoothly and quietly. Flexibility has been developed to a remarkable degree, and the pick-up is swift, smooth and sure.

COMFORT

Your comfort has been well taken care of in these cars—better than in most cars of much higher price. Judge this for yourself by riding in one. The seats are wide, seating five people—the backs are high and shaped to ensure comfort, and the driver has ample room.

SERVICE

The service is founded on definite policy that aims to eliminate delays and to keep every Overland owner in full and uninterrupted enjoyment of his car. And the permanence of this service is made certain by an organization of vast resources and unquestioned stability.

SHANGHAI, NOV. 8, 1919

Trouble-Makers

By Arthur Brisbane

MIKE Yelovitch is arrested by Federal agents at Gary, Ind., and held in $10,000 bail "on a charge of urging a revolution through which the workers would win control of the mills and of the Government."

Mike Yelovitch is behind in his history. This country has had its revolution, back in 1776. Through that revolution workers can get control of government whenever they choose to. All they need to do is think and vote together.

If they cannot agree now, an other revolution wouldn't do them any good.

The majority should run the country. The majority in this country can do that now. And voting is not such hard work.

The United States wants to build get over the war, and go ahead.
People have little patience with those that talk about violence or cause it, directly or indirectly.
Four years of war supplied violence enough.

There are various ways of starting trouble. An ignorant man may get out in the street and yell for revolution, subsequently landing in jail or the hospital.

The well educated man in his private office, making plans for additional and unnecessary profit, and forgetting that this is the twentieth century, may take a stand that inevitably causes violence among the ignorant.

The difference between the workman yelling in the street and the intelligent schemer in the inside office is this: This scheming gentleman is working wholesale and is, therefore, infinitely more dangerous than the individual. A few policemen can dispose of him, whereas the other man has all the abilities lawyers, plenty of time and comfort in which to carry out his plans.

French workmen from the Fau-bourg St. Honore who tore down the Bastille were not the only revolutionists. The powerful, cold-hearted man who had advised the people to eat grass if they didn't have enough bread also had something to do with it.

Professor King, of the University of Wisconsin, says things interesting to workers and employers.

The main difficulty with the country, and a baby ought to know it, is interrupted production combined with inadequate distribution. If tomorrow there should occur the confiscation so much talked about by fools; if all rent, interest and private profits were done away with, and everything distributed among workers, their wages would not be increased more than twenty-five percent. Professor King, of Wisconsin University, shows this.

In other words, the intelligence that directs labor, the self-control that accumulates capital to be used in industry, the science that devises better and cheaper methods of production, all combined, get one-quarter of what is produced.

That quarter is too much perhaps. But this is certain: If you took away the scientific improvements, self-control, careful planning and intelligent direction of a few, wages would not be increased 25 percent. On the contrary, they would be decreased 90 percent.

For, as intelligent workmen well know, and as Russia now proves, labor without direction and without incentive of special profit would be about as valuable as a pair of feet without a head.

Professor King's estimates, which are accurate, should interest workmen. Where one man, for instance, asks an increase of 60 percent the meaning is that sooner or later some other workman must get less. For everything produced, including rent, profit and everything else, is only enough to raise the total pay roll 25 percent.

Workmen asking for bigger wages and shorter hours should always bear in mind that what one workman gets is what some other workman produces, minus the profit, fair share, or unjust share, whatever you choose to call it, of intelligence that directs the work.

You cannot improve conditions by saying arbitrarily, "We shall work shorter hours, and demand more pay."

There is not any Santa Claus with a bag of gold to hand you the extra pay in return for less work.
The little sums that Mr. Rockefeller and some others have saved up would soon melt, on any basis, trying to get for labor something that labor does not produce.

If a hundred workmen were wrecked on a desert island, each would understand exactly that he could only hope for one hundredth part of what one hundred men might produce. Not one would be foolish enough to imagine that rulers or regulations would give him any more than the result of the labor of some other man on the island.

On this island called the earth there are about fifteen hundred million human beings. In our little part, the United States, there are a hundred millions. All that each human being can get here in the long run is the one hundredth millionth part of what all produce.

On the desert island it would be important, as in the United States, to see that each man does a fair share of work, that each man gets what he is entitled to.

And every intelligent man knows that one human being is entitled to more than another, and it is wise to give it to him.
If you had on your desert island a man that could run a hundred yards in ten seconds, fast enough to catch the wild goat, you would say, "That man is able to catch enough goats to feed us all. We must not be stingy with him, he is entitled to something extra, because he can run so fast."

On the other hand, in that desert island you would not allow the swift runner to catch all the goats, put them in the corral for himself and charge you ten times their value. You would make a fair arrangement.

This should be done in this country and in all other countries, and gradually it is being done, thanks to public dissatisfaction, which finds a way of expressing itself when the goat catcher becomes too unreasonable.

Japan And Drink

(For The World Outlook)

Japanese sake is plentiful. It is said that there is a per capita consumption of fifteen quarts a year. It can be found wherever bottled waters are sold, and even children may buy it, although it has never been considered good food for women and minors to drink.

Each year 15,000,000 bushels of rice are consumed in the manufacture of sake, and with the population of Japan steadily increasing, and the rice crop falling on account of the decrease of farm lands through industrial expansion, people are beginning to doubt the wisdom of sake manufacture. The recent rice riots gave an opening to the temperance societies.

Another problem facing the temperance workers is the increasing popularity of imported liquors. Beer is widely advertised as the "fashionable drink of civilized people," and is promising to win a greater number of followers even than sake. Would-be fashionable ladies drink it in European style restaurants, it is served in homes to honored guests, and even schoolboys take it with meals at restaurants. Beer was introduced into Japan in 1876. Today there are 950 breweries, with a yearly output of about 17,000,000 gallons.

The outlook of temperance seems discouraging, but to those who understand the Japanese people the problem is far from hopeless.

Rainbow Gold

From An Article By George E. Roberts, Vice-President The National City Bank, In The Americas

We suggest that the Washington conference will do well to take up for consideration a book upon "The Wealth and Income of the People of the United States," by Professor Willford I. King, of the University of Wisconsin.

Professor King says that the quantity of goods turned out absolutely limits the income of labor, and after a careful calculation of the nation's production concludes that if all rent, interest and profits were eliminated and added to wages the interest would not at the outside be increased over 25 percent. But the elimination of these would leave nothing in industry to finance growth and development.

Following are some of Professor King's comments, which are very pertinent at this time:

"After all reasonable allowances have been made, the fact remains, practically, that beginning with 1870, there has been an increase in the national dividend so enormous that it cannot logically be ascribed to anything but the tremendous advance in productive power due to the revolutionary improvements in industry which have characterized the last half century. It seems improbable that any other great nation has ever experienced such sweeping gains in the average income of the inhabitants. It has, almost necessarily, been accompanied by a general spoliation of the wealth which has been the standard of living."

"Of late we have had a period of 'muckraking' in which all things that exist have been pictured as very bad and growing worse. The misery of life, the difficulty of making both ends meet, has been over-emphasized.
True, it is just as difficult to secure the articles required by our standard of living as it ever was. But our standard of living has grown more expensive. Increase in quality cost even more than increases in quantity. Our wants always have and probably always will increase with our ability to satisfy them, so that there is never any hope of winning the race with our standard of comfort. Such a race is just like chasing one's shadow. Nevertheless, to the present author, a larger per capita supply of economic goods appears to be a most distinct benefit to any nation, and the United States has been greatly favored in this line during the last sixty years."

"The period 1850-1900 saw that come to pass in the United States which the English Utilitarists of the earlier nineteenth century deemed impossible—the improvement of the workingman's economic welfare to the extent that he was lifted out of the conditions formerly thought inferior from those of other life.
He tasted the cup of learning; he experienced the joys of leisure and entertainment, and he so limited the size of his family as to enable his children to continue to secure these advantages. Larger opportunities for more learning naturally brought more power and secured more respect. The army of labor became an ally to be courted or an enemy to be feared."

THE GRIM FACT
After a careful discussion of the division of the national income among all classes Dr. King reached the conclusion that if all rent, interest and profits were added to wages the sum of the latter would not be increased by more than one-fourth. He says:
"It would seem, therefore, that with our present national productive power, any feasible system of distribution could increase the average wage earner's income in purchasing power by more than one-fourth, and this is an extreme rather than a moderate estimate. While such a change might or might not be desirable, it would, at least, work no startling revolution in the condition of the employees of the United States. The grim fact remains that the quantity of goods turned out absolutely limits the income of labor and that no reform will bring universal prosperity which is not based fundamentally upon increasing the national income.
After all, the classical economists were right in emphasizing the side of production in contradis-tinction to that of distribution.
Nature refuses to yield her bounty except in return for effort expended. Demands for higher wages have never yet unlocked her storehouses."

These conclusions are pertinent to this whole industrial and social situation which the conference is to consider. If they were generally accepted they would clear the atmosphere and change the tone of current discussion.
The attitude of wage earners toward their work would be altered and production would be increased.

President Wilson in his recent letter of reply to the railroad brotherhoods said that what was wanted now was not heat but light. When Lloyd George called an industrial conference in London in February to consider the situation presented by the threat of the miners and railroad employees to strike the conference recommended the appointment of a committee of investigation. The best thing the Washington conference can do is to recommend the appointment of a competent commission to examine the facts upon which Professor King has based the above conclusions and report whether the King conclusions are sustained.

A MISTAKE OF FACT
What is wanted is a demonstration of the fact that the distribution of the social product is not a mere matter of selfish struggle, but determined by economic law; that it is impossible for capital to exploit labor in any general sense, because the very efforts of capitalists to increase capital accomplish an inevitably increasing distribution to labor. Despite anything that capital can do, the economic law gives labor a constantly increasing share of an increasing product. Mr. Henderson's doctrine works vastly more injury to the laboring class than anything the capitalists can do.

Dr. John B. Clark, head of the department of political economy, Columbia University, writing recently of the social disorder prevalent over the world, said:

"The motive of it all—the hope of enriching the poor—is based on a mistake of fact. Not only Russian revolutionists but Socialists everywhere believe that the income of the capitalist class, which the proletariat is urged to seize, is several fold larger than it is, and that belief accounts for much of the sympathy which Socialists everywhere express for the Bolsheviks. If Russia is left entirely to herself and if the Bolshevists there gain full control, it will in time be discovered that the wealth which has been seized was originally smaller by far than the Socialists supposed. But that the revolution has reduced it to a pitifully small amount. The unlimited treasure of Socialist dreams is as unreal as the gold at the end of the rainbow, and much of that lesser treasure which was real and substantial has nearly vanished in the grasping. The effects of the Bolshevik movement and the soviet form of government and the pressure for a like system in other countries are based on economic illusions which experience would dispel though at a terrible cost to the countries that had furnished the object lesson. Russia is now paying at a tragic rate the price that is already open to the world that a general spoliation of wealth means poverty even for the spoilers."

These opinions by men who are scientific students of social conditions are entitled to weight in the present critical state. Why not call upon them for the facts and reasons by which they have reached their conclusions?

Merited Reservations

(Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune)

William Howard Taft's endorsement of President Wilson's call for a conference of all production interests conveys the qualifying stipulation that all radicals be excluded, which would seem to partake somewhat of the nature of a reservation.

A NEW CLUB FOR SHANGHAI

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir: There is a feeling abroad, here in Shanghai, that there is a great need for a club where men could meet socially under helpful conditions. I have heard various suggestions made as to the kind of club that would do.

I believe the following points sum up, in bare outline, the general idea; but it is with the hope of calling out suggestions that I venture to write this letter.

1.—The Y.M.C.A. has been indicated as the kind of association that should form a model for a new club here. It is thought that it would not be necessary to use a name like that, but that the new club should stand for the general helpfulness and social intercourse indicated by the letters Y.M.C.A.

2.—A place centrally located, if possible, should be secured with rooms for reading, music, games and refreshments (non-alcoholic beverages). There might be physical culture and sports sections, etc.

3.—The club, it is held, should be open to men of all classes.

4.—Some have even thought that a boarding section might be included in the scheme.

5.—For such a project to be successful, it would be necessary to secure the financial support of a goodly number of men.

I hope others will come forward with suggestions.—I am, etc.,

W. M. C.

RUSSIAN GRAND OPERA CO.

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir: If Shanghai has any pretensions at all in a musical way, and genuine artistic merit receives its due, the Russian Opera Company should perform to a capacity house on Sunday evening. Moussorsky's "Boris Go-dounov," with its wonderful orchestral and vocal effects, its dramatic story and fine historical instinct, is one of the world's greatest operas. And the Russian Company's representation of the opera is a credit to its creator.
Mr. Hostelt's magnificent singing and acting in the title role, and Messrs. Volnoff and Vornoff's studies of the mendicant friars, Valaam and Missail, completely carried away the handful (regrettable to say) of people who attended the first performance given here a fortnight ago. I am, Sir, very truly yours, JAY BEE.

Allied Lands Stunned, View Of Dr. Eaton

New York, September 20.— France, Belgium and England are suffering from shock, the people are tired and spent as a result of the war, and it will be at least a generation before these countries approach anything like normal conditions, according to Dr. Charles A. Eaton, a Baptist minister who during the war was head of the national service section of the United States Shipping Board, who arrived here yesterday on the Aquitania.

Dr. Eaton left America to study industrial conditions in France, Belgium and England on July 26. Yesterday he was accompanied by Mrs. Eaton, but his daughter remained abroad. Besides studying industrial conditions, Dr. Eaton made a tour of the battlefields in Belgium and France.

"Americans ought to thank God three times a day that they live in America," said Dr. Eaton.
"We've been spared frightful suffering and ruin such as the world has never seen, and it is up to every American to take care of his country."

When Dr. Eaton arrived in England, three months ago, industrial conditions were acute.
There were dock, police, bakers' and almost every sort of strikes in progress. The triple alliance, composed of the miners, the railway operatives and the railway material handlers, were threatening direct action in order to make the government nationalize the coal mines. But just before he left England the situation, he said, had improved greatly, and the tension had been practically removed.

"There is a new spirit in England now," Dr. Eaton explained, "and the working people have arrived at a position they had never hoped to attain. The supreme test of the labor parties and the labor organizations of England is now at hand, because there is every indication that they may constitute the next government of England. The test will be their ability to change their line of thought from the class to the nation. The class movement which now exists will have to become a national movement."

INDUSTRY SLOWLY REVIVING In the non-devastated regions of France and Belgium, where raw materials can be obtained, industry is slowly beginning to take on a normal appearance again, Dr. Eaton said. There is still, however, a great deal of reconstruction to be done, and the process will be a very slow one.
The one problem, not alone of these countries, but of Europe in general, as Dr. Eaton sees it, is for the people to get to work again and to produce as they did before the war.

Dr. John B. Andrews, secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation, who has been in France and England for the last two months as technical adviser from the United States to the international commission of arrangements for the international Labor Conference, which the United States, at the request of the allies, is attending.

"The commission brings the governments, the workers and the employers into one conference. It will thus combine the administrative and legislative experience of the official element with the driving power of the workers and the knowledge of the employers. The conference, which will be held in Washington, will not assemble simply to pass pious resolutions, but to make international agreements which are intended to have legal effect in every country. Of course they can only obtain legal effect when the legislatures in the several countries have adopted them."

CONFERENCE CALLED TIMELY
"In the United States the decisions of the conference will go before Congress as recommendations, which they will be free to adopt or reject. The international conference at Washington at the end of October will meet at a critical time in the industrial and social history of all countries and for that reason the meeting will be particularly timely and may well become historic."

Draft agreements have been drawn up to provide bases of discussion at the conference. The points to be considered are enumerated in the peace treaty and include the forty-eight hour week, unemployment and various questions, such as the employment of women and children in industry, the payment of maternity benefit and the minimum age for the employment of children. It is expected that representatives from at least thirty-four countries will attend the conference.

Because He Had No Matches

John Galsworthy, In A Recent Article In Scribner's, Tells A Story That Hits Hard At Snobishness

"It may be cheering to assume that those who have been almost superhuman these last four years in one environment will continue to be almost superhuman under conditions the very opposite," writes John Galsworthy in Scribner's. "But, alas!" he adds, "it is not logical." And then the writer goes on to say:

On the other hand, I think that those who have had this great and racking experience will be left, for the most part, with a real passion for justice; and that this will have a profoundly modifying effect on social conditions. I think, too, that many of them will have a sort of passion for humaneness, which will, if you will suffer me to say so, come in very handy; for I have observed that the rest of us, through reading about horrors, have lost the edge of our gentleness, and have got into the habit of thinking that it is the business of women and children to starve if they happen to be German; or to be murdered and overworked if they happen to be Jews; or of families to be broken up if they happen to be aliens; and that a general carelessness as to what suffering is necessary and what is not has set in. And I think that the rest of us, too, those who have been in the thick of the worst suffering the world has ever seen to set us in the right path again, and to correct the vitriolic sentiments engendered by the armchair and the ink-pot in times such as we have been and are still passing through.

THE CLUB
A cloistered life in times like these engenders bile; in fact, I think it always does. For sheer ferocity there is no place, you will have no need, like a club full of old gentlemen. I expect the men who have come home from killing each other to show us the way back to brotherliness! And not before it's wanted. Here is a little true story of war-time, when all men were supposed to be brothers if they belonged to the same nation. In the fifth year of the war two men sat alone in a railway carriage. One, pale, young, a little shabby, had an unlighted cigarette in his mouth.
The other, elderly, prosperous and of a ruddy countenance, was smoking a large cigar.

The young man, who looked as if his days were strenuous, took his unlighted cigarette from his mouth, gazed at it, searched his pockets, and looked at the elderly man. His nose twitched, vibrated by the scent of the cigar, and he said suddenly:
"Could you give me a light, sir?"

The elderly man regarded him for a moment, dropped his eyelids and murmured:
"I've no matches."

THE LAST HOPE
The young man sighed, mumbling the cigarette in his watering lips, then said very suddenly:
"Perhaps you'll kindly give me a light from your cigar, sir."

The elderly man moved throughout his body, as if something very sacred had been touched within him.
"I'd rather not," he said; "if you don't mind."

A quarter of an hour passed, while the young man's cigarette grew moist, and the elderly man's grew shorter. Then the latter stirred, took it from under his gray mustache, looked critically at it, held it out a little way toward the other with the side which was least burnt down foremost, and said:
"Unless you'd like to take it from the edge."

On the other hand, one has often traveled in these last years with extreme embarrassment because our soldiers were so extraordinarily anxious that one should smoke their cigarettes, not their apples and their sausages. The marvel of comradeship they have performed would fill the libraries of the world.

On The Station Platform—A French War Story

Translated By William L. McPherson

After buying the Paris newspapers, which had just arrived, he made a turn or two up and down the station platform. Travellers hastening toward the exit rubbed shoulders with him, among them soldiers and officers. One of the latter attracted his attention. He gave a start, hesitated a second and then stepped forward.

"Pradil!"

The other lifted his eyes and seeing an officer superior in rank to himself made a gesture of salute. But at the same moment he recognized the man he was saluting. He turned red, then pale.

"Bernage," he stammered.

"Yes, it is I. But calm yourself. I am very glad to see you again," said Bernage, putting his hand affectionately on Pradil's shoulder.

"I was so surprised. And it has been so long—"

"Four years. But who's to blame? Why didn't you write me after you started on your trip to the Indies? We were comrades since college. We were always the best of friends. Yet because you go on a long voyage you forget me entirely. You send me no word—nothing."

"Yes, yes," murmured Pradil. "You are right, and I assure you you will never reproach me more than I reproach myself. I went to India to work, to paint. But I became sick and lazy. I intended to send you news, but from day to day I put off writing. With you, who have always been a friend so constant, so good, so sincere, there was no excuse for me. And months have passed! You aren't angry with me, are you?"

"No, I'm too glad to see you again."

They walked side by side along the platform. Bernage, with his spare and grave figure, his tense look and his gray temples, seemed ten years older than Pradil, whose delicate face showed no wrinkles, whose mustache was blond and whose blue eyes still sparkled with youth.

Pradil resumed:

"When I returned the war broke out. I became a sub-lieutenant. Now I am convalescing from a wound in the arm. It's nothing serious. I don't ask you what you've been doing. I know. People have often spoken to me about you. Yes, comrades who have been under your orders, or in the same sector with you, and who admire you. I had a shock last year when I heard that you were gravely wounded. Are you all right again now?"

"Yes, absolutely."

They took some steps in silence and Pradil, as if to renew the conversation, asked:

"What are you doing here?"

"I just got off a train and am going to take another in ten minutes. I am on a mission. I must go to Paris, and then return to the front. And you, have you relatives here? It seems to be an attractive place—all these woods and gardens, and the villas which you see down there inclosed in verdure!"

"Yes, indeed, it seems to be a delightful spot," Pradil answered, with indifference.

They crossed the tracks in order to reach the platform where the train for Paris would start. Suddenly Bernage said to his companion:

"I see that you know what happened to me."

Pradil had an air of surprise.

"What was that?"

"You know very well. Your expression itself indicates that you have heard. And otherwise, if you didn't know, you would have asked me about my wife—which you haven't done."

"But I assure you—"

"Anyway, listen to me. I want you to know, because you are almost my only friend. Jacqueline left me."

Pradil made a movement to speak, but Bernage didn't give him time.

her. I believed that she loved me. There was never any friction between us. She seemed happy. Didn't she?"

"One day—that 12th of February—I came home and found no Jacqueline. She had left a letter in which she told me that she loved another man and didn't want to live any longer with me. She added that she disappeared thus because she feared my wrath—not so much on her own account as on account of the other man. I have searched and searched and searched. But in vain. I was nearly out of my head. It was then that I needed a friend to confide in. But you were at the other end of the world."

"That's what happened to me. The next summer the war came. I had been an artillery officer after leaving the Polytechnic and had resigned in order to get married. I resumed my rank and I have had many other preoccupations. That's my story. Don't let us talk any more about it."

The cry of a station employe, announcing the train, interrupted Bernage. He climbed on a wagon and, standing on the steps, grasped Pradil's hand. He was about to ask the latter his address, so that they could keep track of each other, when a stout gentleman, with an affable countenance, appeared on the platform.

"Monsieur Pradil, how are you? If you'll allow me, I'll drop you at your villa. I have my carriage here. And how is Mme. Pradil?"

Pradil turned purple. Bernage, hanging from the platform of the train, which was beginning to move, became pale, assailed by a world of doubts. Pradil married? To whom? Why hadn't he said that he lived here? Why had he shown so much embarrassment at moments? And his silence during his journey abroad? Had he ever started for the Indies? Hadn't he, instead, prepared that safe retreat where Jacqueline went later to join him?

Bernage had an access of violent rage. He lived over his sufferings of the past. He couldn't jump off the train, which was now under full headway. He couldn't stop until he had fulfilled his mission. But he wanted to know. He would come back later.

Would he come back later? Suddenly he shrugged his shoulders. Would he come back later? The present, to which he had devoted himself completely, absorbed him. The past, which had tortured him, seemed fictitious, futile and vain—fantastically disconnected with the three years of war. He took account of the fact that he was, for the time being, at least, another man whom that past didn't concern any longer.

The Huge Magnet On Which We Live

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Why does not a magnetized needle point directly north, and could there be any way to overcome whatever obstacles there are?"

In this, as in so many cases, science is unable to tell the "why" of a natural phenomenon, the "how" of which is fairly well understood, as far as it comes within human ken. All the great "laws" of science are simply statements of how things go, without trenching on the question of why they go thus.

In this case the main facts, ascertained by means of our senses, are these: The earth behaves like a magnet, and is therefore considered to be such—a huge, ball-shaped magnet 8,000 miles in diameter. Our small-scale experiments show that in order that any object may be a magnet it must consist of some substance possessing the peculiar property of being affected by and of retaining magnetism.

There is only one substance known to us that possesses this property in a high degree, and that is iron. Nickel and cobalt are also slightly magnetic. So it is inferred that the interior of the earth contains a great mass, or great masses, of iron, to which its condition as a magnet is due.

Next, it is a fact of observation that the earth has two "poles" of magnetism, one in the northern hemisphere, but not, as is so often mistakenly believed, corresponding in position with the poles of the earth's axis of rotation, which are the geographical poles.

The northern magnetic pole, for instance, is more than a thousand miles from the north end of the earth's axis, while the southern is similarly distant from the south end of the axis. In speaking of thinking of the poles toward which the magnetic needle points you must always use the phrase "magnetic pole," to avoid confusion with the pole of rotation, which is what we ordinarily refer to when we speak of the north or the south pole. There is a "magnetic north" as a geographic north, and it is the former that the compass indicates.

It is this fact, viz., that the earth has two opposite magnetic poles, which has led to the conclusion that it is a huge magnet, for the most characteristic feature of a magnet is just the possession of such poles. Every magnet, large or small, has them, and nothing but a magnet possesses this peculiarity. A piece of soft iron, for instance, is a magnetic substance but it is not a magnet, because it has no "poles," toward which other magnetic substances are drawn.

Now we come to something peculiar in the action of the great earth-magnet. In an ordinary magnet the "lines of force," which determine the direction in which a needle points when under the influence of the magnet run direct from pole to pole. It is true that they curve in an up-and-down sense, but they remain in the same vertical planes. Arrived over the poles, they bend right down into them.

But with the earth the case is different. Its lines of magnetic force, while they do run from pole to pole and dip down into each pole when they arrive over it, do not keep always in the same vertical planes, but sway, so to speak, from side to side, somewhat like the waving lines on a phonograph disk.

Where they lie on the earth's surface they bend now east, now west, so that if you could take a magnetic needle and follow its pointing, while carrying with you a memorandum of the direction in which it led you at the beginning of your journey, you would find that the needle turned aside from your pre-established straight line, now more and now less, now toward one side and now toward the other, and when you finally reached the pole, where the needle would point straight down into the earth you would find that at the end of your journey you were traveling in a direction consider-

The Marvellous Sea Swallow

The modern revolt in literature and the drama against sentimentality is somewhat handicapped by the conduct of some members of the lower orders in the animal kingdom. This constitutes a treachery to the supposedly grim laws of nature. Shout "liar" at the novelist or playwright who tells a story in which the word "home" is never mentioned without a sob in the voice, and he has only to reply: "The truth which I tell is cosmic. Consider the case of the sea swallow."

We have been considering it through the medium of J. Arthur Thompson's "The Secrets of Animal Life" (Holt), and we find that no prodigal of the stage or the novel ever had the homing instinct developed to such a high degree. In plays a light is left in the window for the wayfarer, but the sea swallow needs no such aid. Though the seas lie between him and his home he will beat his way against headwinds for hundreds of miles to his own particular nest.

"The technique of the experiments," writes Professor Thompson, "is as follows: A bold, vigorous tern is caught, it is marked characteristically with oil-paint on the head and neck; two tags (small and large, but otherwise duplicate) are prepared, recording the date, the place and the kind of marking; the small tag is fixed round the bird's neck; the large tag is fixed to a foot-long stake pushed down into the sand near the nest. If the bird is a Sooty or tied to a convenient twig if the bird is a Noddy; the bird is put into a large hooded cage and transported to a distance on board ship; it is kept in good health with minnows from the refrigerator; it is liberated at a chosen point, and then its return to the nest is watched for. The most important general result is that these terns are able to return from Galveston, more than eight hundred miles away, over a body of water which apparently does not offer any basis for controlling flight direction. Some returned in about six days, some took nearly twelve, some did not return at all."

Although Professor Thompson says that observers are "not inclined to assume any new and mysterious 'sense of direction' until they have made many more experiments," there seems to be no satisfactory explanation for the uncanny skill of the birds in finding their way home to the exact spot from which they started. The theory that they nosed their way home fell flat when "the nasal chambers of two Noddy terns were filled with warm wax and varnished over" before the birds were taken out to sea and released. They returned without any difficulty. Sight does not account for it, as birds released at night or in thick fogs seem to do as well as those which journey on fair days. In fact, there seems as yet no adequate explanation. It is just one of those things.

Palor, Courtship And Bath

(From The London Daily Mail)

While considering a parlor unnecessary in new houses in rural areas, the Eaton Bray Council, Bedfordshire, is including one in cottages and foregoes a bathroom.

One member said they must provide for courting couples; a girl's young man would not go to a house unless he was sure of seclusion from the father.

Three Factors in the Selection of High-grade Carpets

Floor coverings, like wall coverings and window draperies, are made in various qualities of the same designs and colorings. If, therefore, you intend to possess the best quality and ensure hard-wearing service, examine the combination of the following qualities:

Texture of Wool, Weight of Pile, Fineness of Weave.

You will find this combination in all our high-grade Carpets; and, in keeping with their quality, you will be charmed with the surpassing loveliness of the designs and colorings.

Every Carpet is marked at a competitive figure. Comparison will convince you of the value we offer.

Financial And Commercial News

Hankow Market

Hankow, November 29, 1919.

FINANCE AND MONEY MARKET

Bills were offering freely on the 23rd and 24th, but with the rise in rates the supply fell off and at the close of the week there were no bills offering. On the other hand with the rise in rates arose a small demand for freight.

Tails T. T. on Shanghai: The rate was firm at 96.8 with a fair amount of demand for near delivery. Dollars: The rate rose from 71.2-71.4 buyers and sellers, to 71.5-71.7 in sympathy with Shanghai, which latter however still rules higher than this market. Chinese banks shipped a fair quantity of dollars to Shanghai. Interest, 1.5 percent. Changsha exchange, 26.

IMPORTS

Piece Goods.—There has been more inquiry for forward cargo, and a certain amount of business has been transacted. Manchester reports a very firm market with an upward tendency. Prices are dangerously high, and there is no apparent prospect of any relief in this direction in the near future. Demand continues fairly steady with deliveries satisfactory. Yarn.—The tone of the market is slightly easier, but there is still a good demand, and clearances are very satisfactory. EXPORTS There is practically no change from last week, business being still quiet, owing partly to the high exchange now ruling.
